

Subject Government data practices: personal information protections for peace officers

Authors Duran and others

Analyst Nathan Hopkins

Date March 6, 2025

Summary

In the 2024 judiciary and public safety policy and supplemental finance act, the legislature passed new laws prohibiting the dissemination of certain personal information regarding judges and court staff. See Laws 2024, ch. 123, art. 12. Those laws also defined what personal information would be restricted, classified the information as private data when it is maintained by a government entity, provided a mechanism for judicial officials to seek deletion of personal information published online, and created civil and criminal remedies for violations.

This bill would expand those existing protections for judicial officials to “peace officers,” as defined in the bill.